Artelia strengthens its position in Northern Europe with the acquisition of Kuben Management in Denmark

The international Artelia Group, ranked among the top 10 European construction engineering firms, has acquired 100 % of the shares in Kuben Management, one of Denmark's most experienced project development and client consultancy firms within urban and residential development for public and private clients.

The acquisition marks an important step in the Artelia Group's continued development in Nordics and strengthens the Group's ability to support clients with integrated, multidisciplinary services across the full construction value chain.

A strategic step for Artelia in Denmark

With 120 employees based in three offices across Denmark, Kuben Management brings a highly specialised and integrated consulting model from idea to completed building. The company serves non-profit housing associations as well as institutional and private investors and has historically contributed to the development and construction of more than 160,000 homes in Denmark.

For the Artelia Group, the acquisition provides access to recognised expertise in residential and urban development and strengthens the Group's position in the Danish market where clients increasingly demand integrated, sustainable and efficient solutions. At the same time, Kuben Management gains access to Artelia's more than 50 areas of expertise, including technical analysis and consulting, environmental assessments, geotechnics and sustainability.

"This acquisition is fully aligned with Artelia Group's strategy of strengthening our European presence and broadening our capabilities in key markets. Kuben Management gives us access to the early stages of construction development, where the potential for creating value is significant. The long-term demand for housing remains clear, and Kuben Management's experience, market position and client relationships make the company an ideal partner for the Group," says Alex Fraenkel, CEO of Artelia Denmark.

"As part of the Artelia Group, we will be able to offer clients more comprehensive, efficient and sustainable consulting from the earliest analyses through to commissioning. Artelia's broad technical expertise strengthens our consulting model and creates new development opportunities for both clients and employees. We look forward to contributing to the Group's continued growth and to building a strong shared future," says Ulf Christensen, CEO of Kuben Management.

The two companies share a project-oriented culture built on professionalism, collaboration and a strong commitment to client value. This cultural alignment provides a solid foundation for integration and future development within the Artelia Group.

Shared ambitions for sustainable growth

Together, Artelia and Kuben Management will be better positioned to respond to increasing market complexity and growing demand for holistic consulting in construction and urban development. The acquisition creates a strong platform for developing new services, strengthening client relationships and expanding the Group's position in Denmark and across relevant European markets.

The transaction will be completed once the relevant competition authorities have approved the acquisition. Approval is expected in 2026, after which the collaboration will be implemented gradually, with a continued focus on business continuity, client value and long-term development opportunities for employees across the Group.
